

Colourful croeso at Johnston school

Visitors to the new school in Johnston can be guaranteed a warm welcome and a colourful croeso thanks to the artistic talents of local residents.

A multi-coloured Mosaic with the word 'Croeso' (which means welcome in Welsh) adorns an exterior wall of the new school after members of the Springboard project designed and created it.

Springboard is a Learning Pembrokeshire project which runs a wide range of fun, free and exciting courses for adults and families in certain areas.

Over 40 adults and 30 children have learnt new skills and crafts since Springboard was introduced to the village in April 2016.

The most recent programme, led by arts tutor Pandora Hughes and supported by Springboard advisor Jenny Shaw, was the latest of 13 courses to have run at the school.

"The mosaic complements the school beautifully," said the school's Headteacher Gareth Thomas.

"A lot of thought and effort went into the design and construction of it and that's what we are about as a school; we offer a warm welcome to all and develop students who think about why they are learning and encourage them to try that little bit harder to succeed."

Caption

From left to right: Pictured next to the colourful Mosaic at Johnston school are; Hayley Scale, Jenny Shaw (Springboard Advisor), Natalie Wilson, Mr Thomas, (Headteacher), Cllr Ken Rowlands (County Councillor and Chair of Governors), Donna Sunderland, Laura Phillips (Springboard Coordinator), Leanne Raymond and Jacqueline Thomas.