

New headteachers appointed

New headteachers have been appointed at two of Pembrokeshire's secondary schools.

Fiona Kite from London will become headteacher at Pembroke School and Haverfordwest-based Paul Edwards will take over the headship of Ysgol Bro Gwaun, Fishguard.

Born and educated in South Wales, Mrs Kite is currently Consultant Headteacher at Archbishop Tension's School in Lambeth and has over 23 years of experience teaching in London schools.

At Pembroke she succeeds long-serving Mr Frank Ciccotti who is retiring.

Mr Edwards is currently Deputy Headteacher at Queen Elizabeth High School in Carmarthen.

He will be returning to Ysgol Bro Gwaun where he was Head of Science for many years. He started his teaching career at Ysgol Maes Garmon in Flintshire and has also worked at Milford Haven School as Assistant Headteacher.

The previous headteacher of Ysgol Bro Gwaun, Mrs Nerys Nicholas, recently left to take up the headship of a new secondary school in Ammanford. Mr James Durbridge is currently Ysgol Bro Gwaun's Acting Head.

Both Mrs Kite and Mr Edwards will take up their appointments at the start of the new school year in September.
